

Fabcon Food Systems hires project manager

6 December 2017

Fabcon Food Systems has strengthened its engineering team with the appointment of a new project manager.

One of Europe's leading food processing equipment manufacturers, Fabcon has hired engineering projects expert Michael Pye to the 24-strong team – taking on the management and delivery of a variety of projects in the company's UK, European, African and Middle Eastern markets. He will work closely with third-party contractors including packers, equipment suppliers and designers.

A key specialist in the development and installation of the company's snack production systems, Pye, 52, will work closely with third-party contractors, equipment suppliers and designers – also supporting customers with production scheduling and capacity planning.

Trevor Howard, managing director of UK-based Fabcon Food Systems, said of Pye: "His knowledge and experience is already benefiting our customers as we work with them to design and install a variety of new systems and machinery which meet their needs.

"Michael is a perfect fit for Fabcon. His reputation is second to none and he is exactly the type of person we want as part of our leadership and technical teams."

Pye added: "With clients across the world it is a really exciting time for me, especially to be working with such a wide variety of customers both in Europe and further afield."
